FROM DEAN'S DESK

Dear Readers, Dear Friends,

The month of August 2025 for SSIFS was the busiest in the 12 months, with two of the most important programs we conduct for Indian diplomats, concluding with intense activities. While the 9-month Induction training program for 33 IFS Officer Trainees and two Bhutanese diplomats successfully concluded on 26 August with a celebratory Valedictory ceremony, the MCTP-III for IFS Officers of the 2000-01 batches, which lasted for two weeks, featured engaging and focused sessions on policy-making challenges and opportunities.

Our IFS OTs of the 2024 batch, along with two Bhutanese Diplomats, completed their training program with Public Diplomacy and Cultural Diplomacy modules of week-long duration each, followed by 10 days of Bharat Darshan. In the last week, they presented their dissertation papers, which they had worked on for the past three months. It was interesting to see how the young generation of diplomats sees the future with so much optimism and out-of-the-box thinking, which was evident from most of the presentations. The Calls on the Hon'ble President and the Hon'ble Prime Minister were inspiring and substantive, during which OTs received valuable guidance as they enter into the profession. their first posting abroad in September.

The MCTP-III program, which is the senior-most level of training that we provide at SSIFS, was a great experience for both the participants as well as SSIFS officers, as we engaged in professional and problem-solving attitude discussions with the Ministers, Senior Officers, Experts in respective fields, as well as during brainstorming table-top exercises. The 27-member group also visited Niti Aayog, FICCI, and the International Solar Alliance during the program. Next, they go for a week-long state attachment to understand states' expectations from Diplomacy. Overall, it was a productive 10-day program which would surely inspire the work of these senior diplomats and foreign policy makers of India.

In the same month of August, we also did a Foreign Diplomats training program, as we do every month. SSIFS conducted the first Special Course for 40 Diplomats, 10 each from four countries of North & East Africa (Eritrea, Libya, Somalia, and South Sudan), with the spirit of the Global South, between 04-13 August 2025. The program was customised keeping in mind the needs of these countries and accordingly included sessions and visits connected to development partnership initiatives, food and water security, trade negotiations, disaster management, maritime connectivity and security, AI diplomacy, and an exposure to Global South institutions like ISA and CDRI. Functional skills in digital technology, communications, and negotiations were covered in experiential table-top exercises. The diverse and exhaustive program was focused on learning objectives and network building among four countries and India, and a common understanding of opportunities ahead for Global South countries as they work together.

SSIFS is looking forward to conducting its flagship program, the 3rd Global South Young Diplomats Forum (GSYDF), between 08-19 September 2025, in which we have 43 young diplomats from as many countries participating, the largest group in any program so far in the 4-decade history of SSIFS.

Every month, better than the previous one, is a good measure of growth in the 'Kaizen' way. With best Wishes to our readers from the SSIFS Family.

Digital Sovereignty through Digital Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam: India's Roadmap for Global Tech Leadership

As India marches towards its centenary of independence in 2047, the quest for digital sovereignty is no longer just a matter of national interest; it is a civilizational duty. In an age where data is power, algorithms govern lives, and code shapes consciousness, India must rise not merely as a technological power but as a moral architect of the digital world. This vision is not rooted in expansionism or technological supremacy but in the timeless ethic of Dharma, the pursuit of order, justice, balance, and collective well-being.

Space Weaponization and International Law: An Indian Perspective

As a major space power, India's voice is indispensable in the formulation of future space governance regimes. India's dual message to the world is clear: "Shanti ke liye shakti, aur shakti ke saath samvidhaan." We seek peace, but with strength; and with strength, a rules-based order. The future of space will not be secured by technological prowess alone- but by those who can align power with principles. India, with its legacy of peaceful space use and its appetite for global leadership, is uniquely placed to do just that.

Arthashastra to Algorithms : Illuminating the Penumbras of New Age Warfare the Kautilyan Way

The leaders and people should not be demotivated by temporary setbacks. If the direction is right, the adversities are minor roadblocks in the vast timeline of the Indian civilizational state. As India walks into a world of all against all, the words of the wise sage from 2300 years ago hold deep relevance. The wisdom of Kautilya was not that he developed the earliest known treatise on Security, Power, Administration and Statecraft but to link it with Dharma and order of the system.

India's AI Diplomacy and Strategic Partnerships in the Age of Artificial Intelligence

Achieving the vision of 'Viksit Bharat 2047' will require a seamless fusion of domestic innovation, strategic diplomacy, and ethical leadership. Equally important is India's commitment to ethical AI, ensuring that technological progress respects privacy, mitigates bias, and fosters trust among citizens. If these efforts are pursued with vision and consistency, India will not only secure its own technological future but also help craft a democratic and equitable AI order that serves as a model for the world.

Select Quotes from the Monographs submitted by MCTP III Participants

Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam and Atmanirbhar Bharat are not mutually exclusive but mutually reinforcing. Together, they offer a distinct model of global engagement—one rooted in ancient wisdom but adapted for contemporary realities. India's fusion of the two represents a middle path between aggressive globalization and narrow self-interest. As a civilization-state that revives dharmic values in modern governance, a self-reliant India today contributes and not just competes. In the long game of geopolitics, dharmic approach not only anchors India's long-term strategy but also helps maneuver several short runways to take off its short to medium term policy imperatives.

India's infrastructure diplomacy is guided by the ancient Indian philosophy of "Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam" (the whole world is a family), "bahujan hitaay, bahujan sukhaay" (for the welfare and happiness of all), and "Sarve Bhawantu Sukhina" (let all be happy). These principles emphasize the interconnectedness of nations and the idea that India's national interests are linked to a larger humanitarian framework. A foundational principle of India's foreign policy is its dedication to South-South Cooperation, which is the sharing of its development experiences and resources with other developing nations. This is motivated by a philosophical belief in collective self-reliance and the fight against global inequality. As a former Indian diplomat eloquently stated, India's engagement with the Global South is "ingrained in the very fabric of our culture and philosophy".

India's leadership offers the world a partnership based on solidarity not dependence; on shared prosperity, not a zero-sum competition; and on democratic values, not coercion. The journey to Viksit Bharat 2047 is a promise we have made to ourselves, but its success will radiate outwards in contributing to a more balanced and harmonious world. An India that is a leading power will be a net regional security provider, a source of global public goods, and a consensus-builder with a powerful voice for all those who have been left behind. The world and especially the Global South, has intrinsic stake in India's success.

Global value chains are shifting from hyper-optimisation to resilience, driven by "geoeconomics of trust"—reliability, transparency, and predictability. Countries and corporations are adjusting decision-making accordingly. India is at a pivotal point to serve as a strategic, resilient, and values driven part of global production. Its democratic credentials, large market, digital skills, and industrial policies support diversification and risk reduction. Early successes in electronics, pharmaceuticals, and sectors like automotive, green tech, and semiconductors demonstrate active opportunity pursuit.

Srikar

The success of India's strategic autonomy ultimately depends not merely on diplomatic maneuvering, but on the nation's capacity to build the economic, technological, and military capabilities that make genuine independence possible. In this sense, strategic autonomy and Viksit Bharat represent complementary objectives: autonomous foreign policy enables the pursuit of development goals, while achieving developed nation status provides the foundation for genuine strategic independence in an interdependent world.
